1) To introduce the student to the field of biblical archaeology including its scope and purpose for Old Testament studies.

2) To survey chronologically the major periods of Old Testament history with emphasis on significant archaeological discoveries which illuminate the Scriptures.

3) To present an overview of key archaeological sites, the men who excavated them, and the resulting discoveries which are important for Old Testament studies as a model for the student to analyze and evaluate one important archaeological site.

4) To orient the student to basic geographical features and key towns mentioned or assumed in the Bible.
   a. To become aware of basic geographical features of the Ancient Near East and of Palestine in particular;
   b. To learn map locations of these geographical elements with an emphasis on key towns (settlements) mentioned throughout biblical history.

5) Possibly to familiarize the student with certain manners and customs of everyday life in Old Testament times which may help illuminate the Biblical text.

II. Requirements

A. Reading

Reports on required reading assignments must be recorded and turned in weekly on 1This syllabus [7-22-2011] has been revised and may still be subject to revision.

2 Contact information: gwpbmat@juno.com Office phone: 903-586-2501, ext. 224.
standardized reading slips (see seminary office). Students may be responsible for a quiz at any time over the required reading each day (although not every week). A student may be exempted from a quiz on the day his/her oral report is to be given in class (see below).

B. Research paper and report

Each student must write a 10-to-16 page (double-spaced) paper concerning a significant archaeological site (see below). It must briefly describe the history of the identification of the proper site and its excavation and summarize the main discoveries and their impact upon the Old Testament. Note any ambiguity or disagreement concerning the archaeological data.

In sum the following minimum components should be researched:

1) Suggested biblical city: identification(s) (in the case of site known by Tel name)
   -or Tell identification(s) (in the case of site known by city name)
2) Biblical data referenced and summarized
3) Historical data (non-biblical records)
4) Geographical and/or topographical data
5) Archaeological data—summarizing main excavations (including date and excavator), discoveries and possible contribution to understanding or illumination of the biblical text
6) Proper research parameters: Use Turabian format and utilize at least 7 or 8 sources besides Scripture and textbook(s)—namely books, journal article(s), and Internet research (where applicable, but not exclusively).3

7) Minimum qualifications for an “A” paper: a) include any available primary sources; b) utilize at least one journal article if possible;4 c) judicious use of Internet (see footnote 3).

The primary criteria for grading will be the quality of the paper and the thoroughness of the research. The paper should resemble the format in the 5th or 6th or 7th edition of Kate L. Turabian’s A Manual for Writers of Term Papers, Theses, and Dissertations. An oral report of about 30 to 45 minutes must be presented (normally on the same day that topic is scheduled for class discussion). [Be sure to turn in a finished copy of the paper to the professor before the oral report is given.]5

A list of possible term paper topics include (1) Nineveh ___________________; (2) Babylon ___________________; (3) Ugarit (Ras Shamra)__________________; (4) Elephantine ___________________; (5) Jericho ___________________; (6) Hazor ___________________; (7) Lachish ___________________; (8) Megiddo _________________; (9) Ai & Bethel _________________; (10) Gath & Ekron ________________ (11) Qumran _________________; (12) Compilation and review of websites on Ancient Near journals; museums and virtual locations for ancient Egypt, Palestine or Mesopotamia--7 to 9 pages (with an additional 7 to 9-page summary of data gleaned through the Internet for one site)_________________.

C. Exam(s)

Two exams are planned (see class schedule). The first exam will emphasize identification of geographical elements on maps. The final exam will be semi-comprehensive.

3 Internet Resources—The student may employ some online resources, but limit the Internet to ¼ or less of the total sources. (This restriction does not apply to legitimate journal articles found online.) One should include author, article title, and website (URL) in footnotes and bibliography. Do not be naïve about online resources. If the information seems fantastic or unbelievable, it probably is not true. When in doubt, carefully seek to verify it.

5 The student’s grade will be penalized for failure to turn in a finished report on time or for going beyond the time framework without prior permission.
D. Grading guidelines

The tentative grading criteria are as follows:
Mid-term exam 20%; Final exam (semi-comprehensive) 30%; research paper—25% (plus 1% for the oral report); Weekly work: 15 to 20% for reading documented on reading slips (as well as any quizzes or map assignments); daily grade 4 to 9% (divided between class participation and class attendance).

V. Selected Bibliographic Data

Archaeological Bibliographies
[Remember to consult Hoerth at the end of each chapter (and reference list pp. 423-436) for helpful bibliography]

Old Testament Abstracts
Look primarily under "Archaeology, Epigraphy, Philology" for excellent summations of journal articles.

Selected Bibliography

Compilation of articles reprinted from the journal The Biblical Archaeologist.

   Good pictures and diagrams as well as helpful bibliography.

   Excellent summary analysis of important cities with bibliographies.

   A valuable list of Old Testament verses from Genesis to Malachi which are keyed to many books (and a few periodicals) published between 1950 and 1980.

   Contains excellent bibliographies with each article.

   Helpful on methodology and on specific sites.
